The school directors of Paupack are fairly up against it in trying to comply with the state school law, that is, to establish a sufficient number of schools for the education of every individual above the age of six and under the age of twenty-one. Last year five schools were run for forty-nine pupils while two of these averaged only four pupils for the term. In a sparsely settled district like Paupack patrons should be a little more lenient unless they are willing to pay a double school tax. They should consider that it is impossible for the directors to run a school for three or four children even if they live a little more than two miles from the nearest school. Our parents thought nothing of walking even three miles to school. Anna Meyer, of Tafton, visited Bone Ridge friends on Sunday. W. D. Rowe, of Winding Hill, called at Wilkesville, on Sunday. "WILDFIRE."
Something New in Store for the People of Honesdale. In "Wildfire," the great racing comedy by George Broadhurst, author of "The Man of the Hour," and George V. Hobart, who wrote Marie Cahill's present starring vehicle, "The Boys and Betty," a thorough knowledge of the details of racing is the basis of the much-talked-of second act, and it explains why this play has outdistanced other stories of the race track in its realism. This interesting second act shows the trainer's quarters, a land of mystery even to veteran race goers. The scene is practically an exact duplicate of a prominent trainer's quarters at the leading race track near New York City. It shows a large apartment, with two double barn doors. The room is located on the left of the center of the building, which is always divided into two sections by an archway, leading to the paddock, where the horses are kept. The floor is carpeted, and on the walls are pictures of famous racers and a few old-fashioned chromos. In one corner is a light iron frame bed, and nearby, a bureau, washstand, a trunk, and a small table on which are account books and a pair of field glasses. On the wall crossed American and Irish flags are hung, not because of patriotism and nationality, but a custom as fixed as are the college colors in a freshman's room. Then there is the inevitable cupboard containing bandages and lotions, also a blanket rack in which the trainer's fancy runs riot in the arrangement of gaudily hued blankets. Saddles and bridles are seen in a closet off the room. Pauline Hall, the famous American beauty, who, like Lillian Russell, has found comedy as much her forte as opera, will appear as the central character, the charming widow, Mrs. Barrington, when "Wildfire" is presented at the Lyric on Monday, Nov. 8th. The production is faultlessly staged, and the unusually capable company embraces many well known players.

WILLIAM WEBB.
"THE HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES," the wonderful play which has been adapted from Meredith Nicholson's famous novel, will be presented for the first time at the Lyric, on Friday, Nov. 5th. Much has been claimed for this drama as it is said to be a wide departure from anything given to the stage. Originality certainly marks the story, and it would seem that in its stage dress that rare qualification should be intensified. The company will be headed by William Webb, who was specially engaged for the part of "Bates, the mysterious servant." Miss Hortense Clement, a rarely prepossessing actress, will be the vivacious and engaging Marion Devereaux. Other members of the company are Waldemar Burkhardt, Wayne Campbell, Wayne Lyter, Wm. McCarthy, Walter Lennox, C. C. Leighton, Fred D. Woodbury and Anna Jamison.

Not So Bad if it is Wicked.
Washington, Oct. 29.—"Drop a penny in the slot and get a ticket to the other world," might be the inscription on a machine that is suggested by Rev. Dr. Donald Guthrie, of Baltimore. Dr. Guthrie was talking last night on "Calvinism" at the closing session of the synod of Baltimore at the Metropolitan Presbyterian church here. Coming at the close of a plea for a wholesome, enthusiastic interest in life was the sentence: "Life has become so meaningless and so useless to some that I advocate the setting up of a suicide machine where one can deposit a cent and be killed easily and respectably."
